Caladiums make fantastic pot, hanging basket and container plants. They can instantly add color and bring life to any occasion in which they might be used. In landscapes, they attract attention whether just a few plants are grown or if they are displayed as a massive planting. They thrive in the summer heat and rain!

Florida Blizzard (patent PP 14,406) – A splash of white on a green background provides a unique and refreshing color display when massed together in the landscape or in a pot. Best grown in shade or partial-sunlight.

Florida Whitewater (patent PP 14,845) – A cultivar with good sun tolerance and long narrow (strap-like) leaves with wavy green margins that provide a new look for the landscape in both sun and shade. Use it in landscapes for ground cover, or edging beds and walks, or in hanging baskets.

Garden White (patent pending) – A vigorous variety producing huge white leaves with fine-netted green veins near the thin green margin. Most suited for the landscape and large containers and perform outstandingly in full sun.

Florida Moonlight (patent PP 14,565) – An all-white variety. Great for pot plant production and shady landscape. It makes your garden “glowing”.

Florida White Ruffles (patent PP 14,402) – This cultivar, like its cousin, ‘Florida Red Ruffles’, has a striking contrast in color with its white leaves bordered in green. It has excellent sun tolerance and will perform well in pots, hanging baskets and sunny or shady landscapes.

Florida Irish Lace (patent PP 13,135) – Yes, it’s all green, but what an attractive specimen with its long narrow leaves and very wavy leaf margin that adds such texture to the landscape. It has excellent sun tolerance, so use it in a pot where other sun-intolerant foliage plants can’t go; or along a path of contrasting color to bring out the texture of the lacy leaves and highlight the walkway.

Cranberry Star (patent pending) – A unique fancy-leaved variety attracting attention with its bright white leaves splashed with deep red spots.

Florida Calypso (patent PP 10,466) – A great splash of pink over a green background highlighted by brilliant red veins make the leaves of this variety a real standout in a container or in a shaded to partial sun landscape.

Florida Sweetheart (patent PP 8,526) – This variety produces many wide, bright pink lance-shaped leaves in a unique color pattern, and has been the most widely accepted cultivar in our breeding program.

Summer Rose (patent pending) – This fancy-leaved caladium has a red-purple center, frosted green-white at the edge with a dark green leaf margin. This interesting color will do well in pots or the shady landscape.

Firecracker Red (patent pending) – A fancy-leaved variety that can do well in full sun or partial shade in the landscape or large containers, making it a very versatile plant in the garden.

Florida Red Ruffles (patent PP 13,136) – A striking contrast in color is displayed in the wide red leaves with narrow green margins of this variety that can be used in hanging baskets, pots and the landscape. In addition, this plant has good tolerance of cold and full sun.
