- ITN Title: 'UF19-65' and 'UF19-72' Basil Cultivars
- ITN Number: ITN20-05 ('UF19-65') and ITN20-06 ('UF19-72')
- ITN Territory: As proposed by ITN respondents
- ITN Announcement Date: November 18, 2020
- ITN Proposal Due Date: Wednesday, December 30, 2020, 12PM ET
- Cultivar Description: 'UF19-65' and 'UF19-72' Basil Cultivars (U.S. PVP Pending)

The basil breeding program at the University of Florida in Gainesville, FL was initiated in 2013 with an emphasis on developing new clonal and seed propagated basil cultivars that are profitable for producers and perform well in consumer gardens with little or no care. The main focus of the program has been on breeding resistance to Basil Downy Mildew, Peronospora belbahijii (BDM), from the wild species Ocimum americanum into culinary sweet basil, Ocimum basilicum.

UF's basil breeding program focuses on creating interspecific Ocimum crosses to develop seed propagated hybrids for the garden market. Two such cultivars, designated 'UF19-65' and 'UF19-72', were selected for their superior BDM resistance, outstanding leaf retention, as well as good foliage texture and flavor profile. These basil cultivars are the first inbred basil seed lines released by UF's basil breeding program that show excellent resistance to BDM as well as visual and culinary properties that are acceptable for both gardeners and mass producers.

ITN Description and Specifications (con't)

'UF19-65'

Plants of 'UF19-65' are vigorous and upright growing with an overall mounding habit. Sixteen-week old plants pinched once are 50-55cm tall and approximately 45-50cm wide, with 16 main branches ranging in length from 35-40cm with 3-4cm internodes, and a diameter of 0.6-0.7cm. Branches have approximately 18-20 leaves per branch arranged oppositely. Leaf shape is attenuate at the base and broadly acute at the apex generating an overall ovate leaf shape. Eight mature leaves averaged 14cm long and 9cm wide on plants measured sixteen weeks after planting.

'UF19-72'

Plants of 'UF19-72' are upright growing plants with an overall mounding habit. Sixteen-week old plants pinched once are 45-50cm tall and approximately 40-45cm wide, with 16 main branches ranging in length from 30-35cm with 2.5-3.5cm internodes, and a diameter of 0.5-0.6cm. Branches have approximately 18-20 leaves per branch arranged oppositely. Leaf shape is attenuate at the base and broadly acute at the apex generating an overall ovate leaf shape. Eight mature leaves averaged 13cm long and 8cm wide on plants measured sixteen weeks after planting.

ITN Description and Specifications (con't)

Field and Greenhouse trials were performed in the Spring of 2019 and the Summer of 2020, respectively, to determine and compare marketable yield of 'UF19-65' and 'UF19-72' to that of Italian Large Leaf and Caesar. In both trials, 'UF19-65' and 'UF19-72' produced more marketable yield than both Italian Large Leaf and Caesar. Particularly in the Summer 2020 field trial, the results showed that both 'UF19-65' and 'UF19-72' continued to produce more marketable yield during the hottest time of the year in Citra, Florida than did Italian Large Leaf and Caesar. 'UF19-65' and 'UF19-72' produced up to twice as much marketable yield as did either of the BDM susceptible controls for the entire season. The following photos represent Caesar, 'UF19-65', 'UF19-72' and Italian Large Leaf plants 77 days after transplant in a field at Citra, FL. Note that plants of 'Caesar' (top) and 'Italian Large Leaf' (bottom) are no longer producing marketable yield due to BDM, whereas 'UF19-65' and 'UF19-72' continue being productive well into the summer months.

What is an ITN?

Newly developed cultivars, experimental lines, and plant germplasm are routinely approved for release through UF's Florida Agricultural Experiment Station (FAES). Florida Foundation Seed Producers, Inc. (FFSP), a non-profit corporation and direct support organization of the University of Florida, is continuously seeking strategic production and marketing companies in commercialization of a diverse portfolio of newly developed plant cultivars. For certain crops, several companies may express interest in an opportunity for an exclusive license for an improved plant cultivar. The Invitation to Negotiate (ITN), implemented in 2006, is a process which enables FFSP to fairly and objectively evaluate all commercial proposals and comments to effectively identify superior companies to deliver new cultivars to the public. In return, licensed companies provide royalties back to FFSP for reinvestment in the breeding and development of new, improved cultivars at the FAES.

The ITN process encourages an open engagement of all interested companies and stakeholders. Companies submitting proposals and/or comments to an ITN will be evaluated consistently and fairly by a review committee comprised of staff members of FFSP and expert faculty advisors from FAES.

FFSP strives to secure the partner/partners that best meet the needs of the State of Florida and its people, UF, and the FAES breeding program. Responders to the ITN will be evaluated using a consistent methodology, allowing review committee members to weigh core elements and objectively evaluate multiple proposals. The ITN specifications objectively guide critical responses in a proposal and are designed to explore the project's commercial scope for a sustainable business, consistent with the necessity to deliver FAES plant breeding products and technology to the public. The ITN requires interested companies to describe their prior experience and current business model. Companies are asked to describe a plan of action concerning the new business opportunity. The ITN also requests details of marketing and production plans which will successfully deliver a sound commercial operation and ensure that sustaining royalties are returned to support the FAES breeding program. Initiation of an ITN and the participation by a company in an ITN process does not mean an exclusive agreement will be eventually awarded; only that responsive companies will receive consideration and a fair evaluation of proposals and comments submitted.

At the conclusion of the ITN process, it is everyone's hope that most details can be mutually agreed upon, resulting in an award of a license to a qualified and successful partner.

Please refer to the general conditions of this ITN for specific specifications and instructions.
